

As a flight attendant, cell phone usage on flights would be disruptive to other passengers, a safety hazard that would not be controllable during critical briefings or even on routine safety demonstrations. In my career I believe business passengers consider their flight time a good time to be away from verbal communication.